It seems to me that they will be more like brothers and sisters, whom I am to take care of and teach how to play. We are going to have such nice times together. I love them already, and I know they will all love me. I am sure of it, although I have never seen them, because we are all children, and then they haven t any mother. And I know what that means. Marquis. Oh! I forgot to tell you I had decided that it was best not to bring them to Moraleda for the present. Teresa. Why not? Marquis. They will be better off at school; they write they are contented. It will do them good. Anyhow, I don t want you to be tied down so soon. You will never have any time to enjoy yourself...
