Neatness is not an art requiring the study of a life time; on the contrary its principals are simple, and their practical application involves only ordinary care. To gain the good opinion of those who surround us is the first interest and the second duty of men in every profession of life. First impressions are apt to be permanent: it is therefore of importance that they should be favorable. Frequently the dress of an individual is that circumstance from which you first form your opinion. It is even more prominent than manner. It is indeed one of the first things noticed in a casual encounter or during the first interview. Chesterfield has said that He could not help conceiving some idea of the people s sense...
