Excerpt: .also three sergeants, three corporals, and a drummer. In case of insurrection or invasion the governor, or commander-in-chief pro tem, was given-power to raise all or as much of the militia as was considered necessary. Musters were changed back again to four times a year instead of two. The act of 1760 made possible the organization of cavalry as a branch of the militia. If from thirty to sixty men should desire to form a cavalry troop, they should be free from serving in the infantry. Each cavalryman, however, had to provide himself with a good serviceable horse not less than fourteen hands high, with a good bridle, saddle, holsters, housings, breastplate and crupper, a case of good pistols, a good broad sword, twelve charges of powder, twelve sizeable Raper, North Carolina, a Study in British Colonial Government, 173. This act, moreover, also aimed at making sure that the higher officers performed their duties accurately and promptly. It ruled that any colonel failing to appear at court-martial should be fined, for every offense, five pounds; every captain, three pounds; every lieutenant and ensign, forty shillings, unless they shall make such excuse as the said court shall judge suificent. Officers were made free from arrest by the civil authorities in going to and from musters. The period specified...
