Are working children repeaters more often than those who do not work? Contrary to the popular idea that work keeps children out of mischief, this report shows that among working children, both boys and girls, there is a greater tendency than among nonworkers, to go wrong and to keep on going wrong after the start has once been made. In order to show that it is the working life rather than the home conditions that cause the greater delinquency of working children, the report gives comparative tables as to the home conditions of both working and nonworking delinquents. It further states the relation of particular occupations to delinquency. In this connection it is interesting, though not surprising to note that, in general, the occupations producing the greater number of delinquents are those in which the child works largely without supervision....
